SITUATED one hundred and forty-eight miles east of Chicago. It is the county seat of Allen County and has a population of 55,000. It is a great railroad center, seven steam roads, and four electric railroads enter the city, eighty-six passenger trains steam in and out of Fort Wayne daily, while electric cars pass in every direction at all hours, and the city is fast becoming the metropolis of the surrounding territory.

Fort Wayne is second in doing the largest financial business in the state of Indiana, having seventeen banks and trust companies, and all do a good business. It also is a good manufacturing city, its produce being shipped to all parts of the globe. The retail and wholesale business done in Fort Wayne is not surpassed by any city in the country of its size. Unlike most other manufacturing cities, however, it is a fine residence city, and can justly be proud of its beautiful homes and streets.

There are forty-six churches in Fort Wayne of all denominations, while the educational advantages are remarkable, there being sixteen school houses, where 172 teachers are employed. Fort Wayne's public buildings are worthy of being mentioned, among them are the Court House, High School, the Public Library, Post Office and City Hall.

Fort Wayne has five daily, six weekly, two monthly, and two Sunday papers, and is well supplied with places of amusement. The Majestic and Masonic Temple theatres secure the best attractions in the country, and during the hot summer months continuous vaudeville is played in Robinson Park, which also contains a pavilion, summer hotel and other places of attraction. The healthfulness of the city is universally conceded. This is due to the excellent system of sewerage and good water supply.

Fort Wayne has seven beautifully improved parks, located in different parts of the city and are a great comfort to thousands of its inhabitants.
